

Quincy Compressor Warranty Programs

Summary prepared for Wine Country Compressors | Napa, CA | October 2026

Quincy's warranty coverage is tiered by model line, and on most rotary screw models it is included at no extra cost. The critical detail is that coverage is activated by registration, not by the invoice: an unregistered unit defaults to its factory ship date as the start date, which can quietly consume months of protection before the compressor is even commissioned.

Coverage by program

Activating and keeping coverage

Registration runs through Quincy's Warranty Compliance System at express.quincycompressor.com and must be completed at startup or shortly thereafter. Most extended coverage does not activate without it, and where a unit goes unregistered Quincy uses the factory ship date as the start date. Some programs specify registration within 10 days of receipt.

Third-party oil, filters and separator elements void the program. Quincy ties this to their own fluids and maintenance kits.

Service intervals in the owner's manual must be met, and records kept. Authorized startup is required for some extended options.

The NO BULL extended kit (EWK-2 or EWK-3) must be bought on the same receipt as the unit. Bought separately and it does not qualify. The Extended Warranty Kit Plus can later stretch coverage to five years if purchased within the first three years of ownership.

Submitting a claim

Claims are handled through your authorized Quincy distributor — that is us. Quincy asks for three things with every claim: proof of purchase, maintenance records, and documentation confirming genuine Quincy parts and fluids were used. Missing maintenance records are the most common reason a legitimate claim stalls, which is the practical argument for keeping every unit on a documented service schedule from commissioning onward.

For customers of Wine Country Compressors. We register every Quincy unit we commission and set up the preventive maintenance schedule with you at startup. Questions on coverage for a specific model? Call 707-252-3226.
